	Metodoloxías
Metodoloxías	Descrición
Lecturas	Required readings are chosen chronologically to better understand the social context, as well as the role African American Literature plays in mainstream American Literary discourse.
	Thanks to the detailed syllabus, students will be informed ahead of time of the readings that are taken place in class.
	Students are expected to read critically and come to their own conclusions. They are also expected to come to class with the required reading assigned done, and in depth.
	Instructor would provide a brief introduction which includes critical reception, formal and themes issues, and would point at more relevant aspects so students might be informed before actually starting their own reading of the material.
Presentación oral	Class presentation is team work. Format required is power point presentation.
	Students choose topic to talk about from the list provided by instructor of works and texts we are NOT going to deal with in class. Students should inform the instructor about the author/work of their choice. Students need to include the following: brief plot summary; critical reception (two reviews: one positive; one negative); an interview with writer (when and if possible); an article from a literary magazine or chapter of book, and any other visual material they think relevant (clips from film adaptations; clips from documentaries; articles from media, etc).
	Team is made of 3 students (4 max.)
Proba de resposta	This is an "identify-quizz type" test.
breve	Students are expected to provide brief and to the point responses.
	From a list, students should identify an item, a recurrent expression, a metaphor, a proper name, a setting or a particular statement from the required readings. The idea is to go from the very particular to the more general.
	Students should comment on the reasons why they think that particular word or words are relevant to the whole text.
Sesión maxistral	This is NOT the traditional one-way boring lecture someone might expect. The purpose of this lecture is to familiarize students with the new required text and author, point out at main issues dealt with, comment on critical reception, and ask them to pay particular attention to certain passages, characters' reactions or narrative discoure used.
	Lecture always goes two ways. Students are more than welcome to interrupt and ask questions, or make comments. This lecture-type methodology is, in fact, more a dialogue between students and lecturer where student are NOT the "empty glass", and the instructor is NOT the "full jar".
Proba de ensaio	At this stage in their academic studies, students should be able to write well organized, original, and critical essays. This is NOT a class where you have to memorize dates and names. On the contrary, you are expected to read critically and write with a thesis statement in mind.
	Students, thus, are required to write a comparative essay about topics chosen by the instructor.
	You are given several options (up to five), to write about formal aspects of the text or about recurrent themes or characterization. The use of evidence from the texts are a must, and this is the reason why students are allowed to use the books for this in-class test.

Obradoiro	A work-shop on close reading always helps students to learn how to read creatively and critically.
	Following our methodology (from the more specific to the more general), students are provided a selecction of quotations from thext we are reading in class. With the help of the instructor, first, we point out at the most basic literary aspects (but very much needed). We focus on narrative voice, point of view, language used, tone and style, or characterization and setting. We always try to find a response for the question: Do you think this quote is relevant to the whole text? Why? Why not?
Actividades iniciais	The first week in class students will be given specific information about what is expected from them, the different tasks used in class, and how to help them better organize their time when preparing for reading quizzes, comparative essay or class presentations.
	It is also important to know what you expect from a subjectAfrican American Literaturewhich is not usually included in the syllabus of Spanish Universities.
	I would recommend students to be alert to any news in the media, a film, a concert, or a lecture related to this subject, so as they share that information with the class.

Obradoiro
	Presentación oral/Oral presentations are, in general, a tough task for most students. The idea is to check who in the group has more language problems, and suggest different ways to contribute to the group presentation. We could also suggest a work in pairs for those students who are behind in the grasp of the language.
	Proba de ensaio/Comparative Essay. This is a crucial test for this subject. It is a written text where students have to organize their own ideas about a topic and provide evidence from texts. Some students lack critical abilities, tend to be descriptive and prot-oriented. Instructor would ask them to respond invidivual questions for a take-home exercise where the students will wor on the brief comparison. This would make them be prepared for the more in-depth and challenging comparative essay.
	Obradoiro/"Work-shop" on quotations from text required. Some students find very hard to read critically and come up with the own ideas from a given text. Although this activity is class oriented, emphasis and protagonism is given to students who tend to keep silent when asked for an interpretation of a few lines from a text. Through pointing out at the particular aspects that a relevant, and need to be analized, students get the grasp of what a "close reading" means at the same time they develop the own ideas from the given text. If time allowed, we tend to work in small groups (max. 4 students) where students are given a list of quotations, and the group is assigned a particular quote to fully analyze. After fifteen minutes (aprox.) each group provide their own interpretation, although not always agree with each otherwhich is a plus. They have to provide evidence from the text.

Presentación oral	Students would work in groups (up to 4 students max.), and present a topic to the class.	30
	From a list provided by the instructor, students choose one particular author and text which is NOT included in the required readings list.
	This is a power point presentation. They are required to provide, at least, the following information: brief plot summary; critical reception of work (minimum of a possitive and a negative review); an interview with the author (if and when possible); information from a chapter of a book;; they can also include some visual material such as a clip of the film adaptation, a clip of a documentary, or news from the media). Students are encouraged to get some cards with notes, but they are encouraged not to read for the whole presentaton.
Proba de resposta	This is the "Identify-Quizz" test.	10
oreve	Students are provided with a list which include some of the following: items, metaphores, recurrent expressions, brands, intertextual information, proper names, settings, etc.
	Students should identify author and text, and comment on the particular word/words given.
	They would comment on the reasons why they are relevant to the whole text. Why? Why not?
	Responses are open, but students should use evidence from text.
	"Indentify-Quizz" is based on information from required readings.
Proba de ensaio	This is supposed to be the most relevant test because it covers a wide range of tasks. Students should show	30 they have a good grasp of English. They have to express their ideas clearly and coherently.
	Since this is a comparative essay, students have to choose from several options, and provide a well organized essay, where they make clear their points at the same time they support their ideas with evidence (quotations) from the text. Essay needs and introduction, a body and a conclusion. This is NOT a descriptive task, and I am not expecting to read your class notes, but learn from your personal and creative reading of the texts/themes required. Essay is based on information from required readings.
Obradoiro	Obradoiro/Quotation Test.	30
	Based on the experience gained through the "Quotation Workshop", students are prepared to pass an in-class test where they are supposed to focus on ONE particular quotation and provide not only a close reading, but also to identify author, and work, narrator or protagonist, tone and style.
	This is NOT a descriptive question, but a question where the student is supposed to read critically. Quotations are selected from the required readings.
	Students are provided several choices (up to five).
	It time allows we are planning to have TWO QT (2x15=30)

Observacións avaliación

Depending on the number of students we could have more than one workshop on quotations, or improvise some extra "Identify-Quizz". It will only benefit the students. Students should pass ALL the tests/assignments to get a final grade. Those who fail and whose average grade is below the passing grade will have to sit for July exam. & amp;nbsp; The July test has the following sections: 1) "Identify-Quizz" questions to choose from a list given; 2) One or more quotations from the required readings to focus on them, identify work and author as well as provide a close reading, and analyze form, structure, language used, theme/s, setting, or particularities about gender, race, etc. Students should respond to the following question:

Do you think this quotation is relevant to the text? Why? Why not?. 3) A comparative essay (introduction, body and conclusion) from the required readings. Students should provide evidence from the texts to make their points stronger. Students are allowed to bring their reading books to the class. You do not need to memorize for this exercise. You need to read critically and write coherently. For the three types of tests students will have a list with several options. N.P: A student will receive a grade of "Non Presentado" in case they do not sit for the July test and / or they did not complete 50% or more of the required assignments for the June continuous evaluation. & amp;nbsp;Students who are officially allowed to attend only part-time should contact instructor throughout the first TWO weeks of semester to discuss the specificities. Students can contact instructor via e-mail (maria.frias@udc.es), but a personal appointment is needed too. & amp;nbsp;In case students could not be able to sit for any of the tests required, they should contact me as soon as possible, to try and solve the problem. & amp;nbsp;
