Methodologies
Methodologies	Description
Introductory activities	Introductory sessions, where activities aim to obtain information about students' level of competence, in order to advance in agreement with their expectations and requirements.
Guest lecture / keynote speech	Lecture mode, accompanied by audiovisual materials, with the aim of increasing students' knowledge of the English language and the topics covered.
Directed discussion	Discussion in pairs and small groups, monitored by the teacher, in which students' skills are put into practice, whereby informal, spontaneous conversations and debates can take place.
Speaking test	A test in which communicative competence is assessed, within the context of an individual or pair interview which takes place with one or both of the teachers.
Seminar	Practical sessions where the four basic communicative skills are developed, with regard to topics contained in the programme or others that may arise.
Objective test	Written examination. This allows teachers to assess the knowledge and linguistic skills acquired, developed and improved during the course. This may include several types of questions: essays, multiple choice, gap-filling, transformation and other exercises, and a listening test. It will be almost exclusively based on materials covered in the course of the classes.
Oral presentation	This is a presentation in front of the class (medium size DI class) involving a topic for argument or controversy chosen by the student her/himself. Students should come to some conclusion after considering and explaining the main points. They should use PowerPoint or similar to back up their arguments.
Student portfolio	Students should keep, register and arrange materials, which are the result of lectures and other activities, with their own comments and grades assigned to them, so that they can follow their own development. It should include their compositions together with the comments and corrections made by teachers. Also any other research and work carried out by themselves independently.

Personalized attention
Methodologies	Description
Student portfolio	Teachers (both the teacher in charge of the course and the language assistant) will assess compositions during the course. Students should take into account the corrections and comments made and apply them in future work done. They should consult with teachers concerning errors and necessary improvements to be made, and make use of self-study time to apply corrections made.  All students should make use of teachers' office hours, which are there for the purpose of individual monitoring of progress.

Assessment
Methodologies	Competencies	Description	Qualification
Speaking test	A6 A9 A15 A18	All students will perform a speaking test at the end of the four-month period, individually or in pairs, in which they must display communicative competence in the English language. Students will be assessed on their ability to make themselves understood, their coherence, fluency, pronunciation and also their lexical and grammatical complexity and correctness.	10
Seminar	B3 B6 B8	Students will be assessed according to their attendance and participation (10%) and their performance in class activities throughout the course (5%).	15
Objective test	B1 B2 B10 C2 C4	An objective test based on materials covered in class, further reading and assignments required by both teachers. Includes various sorts of exercises, a composition and a listening test.	40
Student portfolio	A1 A6 A9 C2	Written compositions will be assessed. The characteristics of each will be explained by the teachers involved.	20
Oral presentation	A6 A9 B2 B4 B8 C2	Students will talk about a topic chosen by her/himself, where there is an element of controversy involved. It should be based on a text where a point of view is expressed, and the student should include and argue his/her own point of view on the topic. This test is individual, cannot be done in pairs or groups, and should be performed without notes. They should make use of a PowerPoint or other presentation, but this should only be consulted, not read in its entirety.	15
