General description	he material is developed through this course is essential for the exercise of the profession. The law regulates all areas of our life and career, turns out to be one of the most important. Commercial law is a special part of private law which regulates social relations in a particular field: the trade, enterprise and traders but also the consumer. Therefore, we always affects and are subject to that law. His knowledge is essential for our rights and obligations in commercial transactions. This is an evolving set of rules, which increases the dynamism of ICTs thread and seen in the gradual disuse of the check, promissory note, etc., Being replaced more and more by the banking law, entries. Also, it is remarkable how different forms of commercial contracts are being replaced by general conditions as in the rest autonomy and opportunities in hiring, consider the contract of carriage or in the contract of insurance. In a time of crisis like the current trade law is front page of all media, not only for the situation in which he finds our business community but also by the bankruptcy proceedings that large entities are known. An analysis of the crisis, its consequences, without a smattering of commercial law would be biased and limited. The management consultant, economist, the person working in banks, local development agents, insurance agents, etc., Every professional should know your rights and obligations but also know the client to lend her support or this requires the advice you at any given time. Through this course aims to give a basic understanding that business life demands.
