General description	This course is focused on an idea: Europe had a common legal past. In the Middle Ages, the so-called "Ius Commune" was studied in all the universities and it was used by the jurists from around the old continent. This common law transcended national and legal boundaries. For this reason, the history of law in Europe has the same vocabulary, that was created by the "ius commune". This law consisted of Roman, Canon a Feudal law. As the rest, Spain has been part of this European reality. Our juridical past is determined by Europe because Spain has not been an island on the continent. But also, the different local institutions (a kingdom, a principality, a feudal lordship, a monastery) had their own law, with their particularities, the so-called "ius proprium" (particular law). The principal aim of this course will be the knowledge of the common legislation of Europe and the singularities of the "ius proprium". The addition of the "Ius Commune" to the "ius proprium" will show the "system of Ius Commune". Then, it's very important to understand that the big legal categories used in Western Europe had the same origin, the "Ius Commune". Nowadays, if we speak about "property", "obligation", "will", we use the meaning created by "Ius Commune": dominium, obligatio, testamentum.
Contingency plan	1. Modifications to the contents: None 2. Methodologies *Teaching methodologies that are maintained: Deliveries of tasks and practical activities will continue to be carried out through Moodle. *Teaching methodologies that are modified:The master teaching sessions will be taught through Microsoft Teams and will be recorded and made available to students in the subject space located in Microsoft Stream. A link to that space will also be enabled from Moodle. The interactive teaching sessions will take place in the same way. In any case, the schedules that were developed in the face-to-face sessions will be maintained. 3. Mechanisms for personalized attention to students: Email, Moodle and Microsoft Teams. 4. Modifications in the evaluation: In case of suspension of the face-to-face activity, the planned assignments will be replaced by others managed through Moodle: practical activities and tests. In the case of oral exams, they will be developed through Microsoft Teams *Evaluation observations:Teachers will be available to students by email and by the Microsoft Teams application to resolve all doubts and questions that may arise among students, both in terms of content or assessment system, like problems with technologies. The principles that teachers will follow will be flexibility, empathy, common sense and equal opportunities for all. 5. Modifications to the bibliography or webgraphy: None
