	Methodologies
Methodologies	Description
Guest lecture /	Explanation by the teacher of the contents of the subject in the classroom. The classes are to understand the concepts and keynote speech	theories and raise possible doubts about them. During the course, special sessions can be held with invited people, as well as attendance at seminars, conferences, colloquiums and conferences related to the subject matter of the subject, whenever possible. In that case, attendance for students would be mandatory. Likewise, and as far as possible, training trips may be carried out with visits to museums and socio-cultural projects underway or already carried out.
Supervised projects	The students, individually or collectively (no more than three) will carry out a work that involves the writing of an applied study based on culture and heritage by exposing a museum-territory. These works will be directed or supervised by the teacher. For the preparation of these works, students will rely on the existing specialized bibliography for each of the different topics, as well as on projects carried out by different institutions. The systems to carry out this work are access to the existing bibliography on the subject, the survey, the participant observation, the in-depth interview with different experts and the discussion and debate groups that allow them to specialize and know in depth the reality of the different institutions and organizations of culture, heritage, tourism and management. This work will be delivered before the exam.
Workbook	Reading, by the student, of fundamental texts or related to the subject, among those indicated by the teacher and, where appropriate, proposed by the student. Students should read and present orally to their classmates one of the readings agreed with the teacher. In addition, you must actively participate in the subsequent discussion of the readings, both of the one you have presented, and of those presented by your classmates.
